A public lecture on 'Chemistry: The fascinating world of Molecules', organised by the Infosys Science Foundation here on Saturday, drew the participation of over 500 students from various educational institutions in the Malabar region.

The seminar aimed at motivating young students interested in pursuing science as a career was opened by A. Ajayaghosh, senior scientist from the National Institute for Interdisciplinary Science and technology (NIIST).

Mr. Ajayaghosh said chemistry was an evolving branch of science and everyday one would be able to discover new things. Chris Gopalakrishnan, Trustee of Infosys Science Foundation, said the foundation was encouraging more students to take up science and research.
